

General Education Online Announces Availability of Development site to Public

The Internet (2003-06-07)

General Education Online today announced the availability of the development website to the public. Development has picked up in the last 2 weeks, as items continue to be added into the existing solid framework.

So far the website has undergone major website layout changes, as well as a ground-up re-write of several core GEO functions. The most recent new functionality is the integrated news area, which will replace all existing news places when it is released to the public later this month.